Digital Teaching and Digital Humanities in Taiwan Studies

International Workshop in RUHR-UNIVERSITÄT BOCHUM, Germany

09.30(Mon.) -10.02(Wed.) 2024

Call for Abstracts

The aim of the workshop is to discuss different ways of teaching Taiwan studies through digital means. Given the social and cultural diversity of the student population, how to better track and support individual learning progress is becoming a major challenge in schools today. Digital media and learning infrastructures allow for more personalised learning in many ways. The key is to provide an appropriate level of learning content that promotes long-term learning interest and effectiveness. However, with increasingly sophisticated tools for data processing, how do we create appropriate applications in various fields of Taiwan studies? To see more scalability and opportunities, we invite research abstracts on digital experiences and formats, including but not limited to:

-Digital tools and techniques

(Databases/Information technology applied to teaching/Artificial intelligence in education)

-Distance learning

(Massive Open Online Courses/ Virtual School/ Online Learning)

- Interactive learning in different areas

(e-learning platforms / museums / libraries / exhibitions / universities / schools)

Case studies in political science, anthropology, literature and history are most welcome.
